MESSRS. EDITORS: I see from your paper of yesterday that Jno. S. Van Gilder has enjoyed and, on the joyous occasion, he has delivered PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—The iron clads brilliant speech—which speech is reported in your paper, and contains some defamatory remarks concerning me. I. therefore, claim, through the same channel, the right to answer his scurrilous attack.

He charges that I was concerned in making a certain contract for a steam fire engine some four years since, and insinuates that I swindled the corporation out of $1,000 in the trade. Now, sir, I wish to say that the author of that assertion asserts an unmitigated falsehood-and he knows it as well as I do. The contract alluded to was made, entirely, by the agent of Mr. Silsby himself, and the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, in council assembled. I had nothing to do with making the contract. My only connection with the affair is this: I was requested to borrow the money from the citizens of Knoxville to pay for it. 1 undertook and accomplished that arduous task. The money was collected by me and every cent of it paid over to the proper parties, as I stand ready to prove before a jury of my countrymen. What I did, was done from a sense of duty to the citizens of this city. I never charged or reof such extraordinary character that I will have the matter investigated at once. Please show this dispatch to the Attorney General."

"Undoubtedly justice will be speedily meeted the ceived a cent for my services, neither was I capable of conceiving or thinking of such a thing. Had I have possessed the scheming proclivities of a Van Gilder, I probably would have acted differently, and pocketed a handsome sum by the operation. Just here let me remark that the penuriousness of Jno. S. Van Gilder, on that occasion, came near proving fatal to the undertaking. When I started out to borrow the money to buy the engine, I determined to put my best foot foremost, and got the most generous and public spirited parties to head the list. Consequently, I called upon Messrs. Cowan, McClung & Co., to Jno. S. Van Gilder's counting room, expecting him, as a millionaire and agent for the princold, unfeeling way, began his usual remarks. $100 to have had his name of the list, as it was etting a precedent for others to follow, which, had they have done it, would almost have defeated me in procuring funds. I was truly hap-py, however, to find that those I called upon, cast a sneer upon the little mite, of Jno. S. and took pattern after more generous signers, and subscribed larger sums. The consequence is, we now have one of the prettiest and best little steamers that was ever built; and I am truly proud of it. And al-though worn down by age. I run with that "machine" as an humble fireman; and when the dread fire-bell sounds alarm at midnight, I leap from my bed and hasten to my neighbors assistance. Between twelve and one o'clock yesterday Mr. 1. E. Mr. Van Gilder not giving an equivocal answer immediately, Mr. Barry repeated the question, and asked in tones that admitted of no refusal, whether he had charged him with swindling the corporation To this Mr. V. $2,000 00 Premium.

It is not too soon, Mr. Editor, to begin to moot the question of premiums for our Fall Fair. The sooner the better. It won't do to wait antil we are on the heels of the Fair. That would ruin us. Hence I now sound the key note. We must, by some means or other, raise himself with another one of his hired serenades, a premium of $2,000 00 for the fastest horse on our mile track. Would not that be a grand op-portunity? The best stock of many of the States would rush to our gates for entrance, and the owners would be willing to pay at least ten per cent for en-trance. How easily we could get our money back and add thousands more to our coffers ! This is lesson first on the subject. C. W. CHARLTON.

Philharmonic Concert.

The Philharmonic concert last night was as isual a success. A full and choice programme was presented and all performed their parts well; indeed so well that to discriminate might seem unjust. However, it is but right to speak of the Tenor Solo, "Millie Dreme," by Millard, which was sung by Mr. G. A. Fitch, and received with rounds of applause. It is no praise to say Mrs. Barton sang well; she never does otherwise. The closing piece, "The Heavens are Telling," chorus from the creation, by Hayden, sung by the Society, was especially good.

Revival.

A revival is in progress at the Baptist chapel on McGhee street, conducted by Dr. Carson and Rev. J. L. Lloyd. Three conversions have been reported, and eight penitents presented themselves at the altar on Thursday night. Rev. C. L. Bowling was expected to arrive last night and assist in the meeting. There will be preaching to-night.

CURING HAMS .- Mr. S. W. Ficklin, of Charlottsville, Va., furnished the following recipe for curing the hams which he exhibited at the Virginia Fair:

"For each hundred pounds of ham, ten is, or whose whose house is being consumed. It pounds salt, two ounces saltpeter, two matters not whether it be one of the stately structures of Jno. S.
